We think that analyzing HTTP requests and load testing a website ought to be easy. It is something that ought to require a couple of minutes to install and run regularly throughout the evolution process, so which you could monitor the performance of your websites as you're building them.

We assembled West Breeze WebSurge with programmers and testers in your mind to make it effortless to make HTTP requests or whole sessions, then play either individual URLs for either API or reply testing, or to get full-on pressure testing under heavy load. It's simple to share sessions which are simple text files and may be kept on disk with jobs, shared folders, or cloud storage or through source control for many users' access.

Quick and Effortless URL and Load Testing for your Internet applications on Windows

West Wind WebSurge is a Windows program that helps you to easily capture and play URL requests, either separately for a simple program, support, and API testing scenarios, or under significant load for pressure testing situations. WebSurge makes it effortless to save, share, and reuse URL sessions you've created, so it is simple to begin sessions on your own or someone else's device.

URL and load testing is a vital point in the creation of any site, and more frequently than not, it's likewise a time-consuming one.

But, dedicated application alternatives do exist on the marketplace, together with West Wind Internet Surge being among these. The program permits you to capture HTTP requests either independently or at complete sessions, putting a great deal of focus on both transparency and efficiency.
