Micro Focus DevPartner Studio enhances Microsoft Visual Studio Professional, Premium, and Ultimate variants having an award-winning package of code quality feature that increases programmer productivity. DevPartner Studio automatically detects and diagnoses software flaws, performance issues, and security vulnerabilities early in the creation process--when issue resolution is the most cost-effective. With expert guidance, coding standards, and best practices built-in, DevPartner Studio Professional Edition empowers Windows software teams to increase application quality, maximize developer productivity, and provide superior software reliability, functionality, and safety.

DevPartner is a group of applications development and testing applications manufactured by NuMega, obtained by Compuware in 1997, which on June 1, 2009, marketed it to Micro Focus. There are two variations: one for native and .NET Windows programs, and yet another for Java software. It's presently sold by the MFI subsidiary Borland.
