Ginno Legaspi review - SoundBytes Magazine:

Motherships Science Fiction Sound Effects made available from Bluezone Corporation, a sample producer known for their stunning atmospheric releases. It's a 1.21 GB high-quality effects, drones, and textures library featuring 129 innovative samples in the format of WAV. If you're a film or TV composer for sci-fi or a composer of soundtracks for video games, This library will be of interest to you. Examples in the collections include alarms indoor ambients and machine drones, computer alarms, mechanical devices, mothership radars, lasers Rumbles and energy beams, and transmission sounds. The concept is, obviously, sci-fi space sound that includes all sorts of synthetic, robotic samples that are a bit far-fetched. From the sounds of a huge mothership ( think of the movie District 9 ) cruising 'faster-than-the-speed-of-light', to the sound of a nuclear reactor core rumbling, you'll find it here. I think Bluezone must have been extremely creative when creating this library since the programming is smooth and the sounds are astonishing. Overall, the library is well-designed and is very inspirational.
