The Subtle Art of Filming Screens: Record a Top-down iPad Shot: Are you tired of your screen recordings turning out too bright or washed out? Whether you're showcasing artwork on your iPad or capturing the process of creating music on your laptop, mastering the art of filming screens is crucial.

In this class, I'll share my expertise gained from years of filming iPad tutorials for my sister Di Ujdi. You'll learn valuable techniques to ensure perfect top-down shots of your screens, eliminating reflections and achieving ideal lighting.

Here's what you'll learn:

- Best lighting techniques for capturing screenshots effectively.
- Strategies to avoid unwanted reflections on your screens.
- Use manual exposure mode in your camera to match the screen to your scene seamlessly.

This class is designed for intermediate learners with some knowledge of camera operation. However, beginners can also benefit from a simple guide to manual exposure included in the course.

While a camera that supports spot metering mode is preferred, it's not essential. Whether you're creating iPad tutorials or recording any content involving a screen, this class is tailored for you. By the end, you'll feel confident and equipped to tackle any screen recording scenario with ease.
