Madison Street Sans, Serif, and Script are text fonts modeled after the writing style of Elaina. They're intended to complement any script fonts. But, you'll have to place them at the smaller size of the point (about 1/3 of their size) to achieve the ideal weight and scale.

The hairline weight in the Madison Street script fonts is extremely thin. At smaller sizes, as high as 40 pixels there is a possibility of that the text is breaking when you print to printers on desktops. To prevent this from happening you can outline stroke the text with a very small size (.1 - .3 number). This should increase the quality of the text without adding to the overall weight.
