A "House Vocal Pack" typically refers to a collection of vocal samples and recordings designed for use in house music production. House music, a genre that originated in the 1980s, often incorporates vocals as a key element in its tracks. Vocal packs provide producers with a variety of pre-recorded vocals, vocal loops, phrases, and sometimes even one-shots that can be used to enhance and create new musical compositions.

These packs may include different styles of vocals, such as singing, spoken word, or vocal effects, catering to the diverse needs of house music producers. They are often used to add depth, emotion, and a human touch to electronic music productions.
