Drawing without Fear: Overcoming the Blank Page: This class focuses on how to draw when you're stuck. The blank page is often overwhelming, and I'm here to guide you with that. If you're an artist at whatever level and have ever experienced an issue with your artist block, this article might assist you!

With various ideas and exercises that I gathered through the assistance of fellow artists, you can make some blank white pages or digital canvasses with me. The purpose of this class isn't to draw beautiful sketches but to figure out a way to start. As they say, removing all your bad drawings is imperative to ensure that the better ones will flow!

You can choose the tool you prefer, whether either dor traditional, or even decide at the time if one of my tools could be right for you or if you are looking to demonstrate my first-hand experiences with the techniques and ideas, so don't be shy to follow along as I struggle through the pages!

Things you may need:

- Sketchbook, Paper, and Digital Canvas (in the programs Procreate, Photoshop, ClipStudio, or any other program you like)
- Drawing tools like colored pencils and colored pens, along with markers, watercolors, or whatever else you want
