Let me clarify The presets I'm talking about weren't created to mimic films. They were created in conjunction with and following the shoot of hundreds of films of medium and 35mm format film for my own work over four years. I gained a lot of knowledge about the things I love about the film, and in a manner that I could finally be in a position to translate the ideas into action and words. But simultaneously, I realized that, as with all media, film does have its limits, and some things cannot be replicated. I was not looking for a way to market my digital film work, rather, I was looking for a way to give my digital work spirit. I wanted deep shadows that didn't lose the dynamic range, texture that was not loss of sharpness, and colors that could be altered enough to create a feeling of nostalgia and mood without dramatically and unnecessarily altering my images in the way that is so common with digital.

What did I do? After hundreds of thousands of digital and film images, I came up with the most stunning designs I've ever created. I told myself that in the next year if I still felt as enthusiastic about these designs, I would make them available for release. The time has come to release them, and I'm still using these presets on all kinds of things. As my clients from commercials are enthralled with the color and clarity, they're getting from my work. At the same time, my digital photos are getting confused with film more often than ever before.

Purchase includes the exact presets as I utilize the ones I use. 14 presets total that covers a variety of lighting situations. Changing the white balance as well as the exposure and contrast are the fastest methods to determine if a particular preset is one to use for your photograph (for any set of presets).

Lightroom Preset Packs cannot be returned as well as Lightroom CC, Lightroom CC Classic as well as Adobe Camera Raw (Photoshop CC) compatible.
